

The Grapevine

Let's start by wishing you all a Happy New Year!! We're never sure when it's too late to say that but since we don't usually follow convention (one of us still has their Xmas Tree up!) we're going to take the opportunity to say it. It's been a tumultuous start to the year as far as world news goes so let's focus on nicer things.

We saw the Northern Lights here a few days ago and those of us lucky enough to be out at the time enjoyed a spectacular display of nature at its best (can tick that off your bucket list now and much cheaper than that trip to Norway you had planned!). We have interesting and positive news about the village Amenity Area (read on for more info) and it looks like we will be having monthly visits from Pizzeria Italiana from now on (you may have just missed the first one on 30th Jan). We've had to say au revoir to yet another much loved Hankerton resident, Peter Blizzard, who has gone to live with his family in Malvern – we are so used to seeing him around the village it seems strange without him – I still look for him when I'm driving past the bus stop in the mornings. We'd like to wish him all the best and hope he'll come back occasionally to see us – there'll always be cake here for you Peter! Eds.

Deadline for news for the April Grapevine: March 10th 2026

In the depths of our winter, while having often to put up with cold, wet and windy weather, we can be forgiven for looking forward to being able to enjoy the outdoors in the more clement spring and early summer. Also, we will welcome the return of summer migrants, both insect and birds, and in the case of the latter, enjoy the song of warblers as they establish breeding territories and attract mates. But do they actually go away in winter?

The Blackcap (Sylvia atricapilla) is one such warbler, and it can be found in summer in woodland or scrub, but it is now a common garden visitor during the winter months as well. It is mainly a greyish looking warbler, but in the case of the male, it has a black crown or cap, and in contrast, the female cap is chestnut coloured. If seen, there can be little doubt as to the species.

It has a song that is compared favourably with that of the Nightingale but is difficult to distinguish from that of another warbler, the Garden Warbler. However, the Garden Warbler is featureless in its plumage, which will help to easily distinguish between the species if you are listening to one singing – but you have to spot the bird first!

Historically, British Blackcaps migrated in winter to southern Europe and northern Africa around the Mediterranean, returning around April. In recent decades Blackcaps have been seen in gardens during the winter feeding on the bird food provided and on berries on shrubbery, (during the summer they are insectivorous), and it has now been established by researchers that these winter birds are not British Blackcaps that have decided not to go south, but German and Austrian Blackcaps that have left the generally colder and harsher winter weather experienced there for the less cold, if damper, British weather. So, Blackcaps are one of many bird species that choose to come here for less cold winters.

Come summer the returned adult pair will build a loosely woven nest of stalks, lined with horsehair or other animal hair, in the fork of a bush not far above ground level, especially in bramble thickets. Four to six eggs are laid, which are like a dumpy oval in shape, and pale coloured with brown flecking. The young are fed hairless caterpillars until fledging around 12- 14 days after hatching. Occasionally the adults will raise a second clutch in July, before setting off south for the winter.

The overwintering European birds will have returned to their “homeland” to raise their broods there. It is always suggested that the male birds that will be most successful in breeding are those that establish their territory first, which begs the question, “Why don’t the German birds stay here after the winter and establish territories before the Brits even come back from the Mediterranean?”. No definitive answer has been established yet, but could be due to instinct driving the birds to return to the area they were themselves born in.

The conservation status of the Blackcap is “Good”, with numbers on the rise – about 1.2 million territories in the UK each year. However, this population is not helped by the continued catching of birds around the Mediterranean for the illegal consumption by humans. One analysis suggested that up to a quarter of western European Blackcaps meet their end through this despicable trade. Here, predation by domestic cats is an additional recognised problem. Even so, you are very likely to come across Blackcaps around Hankerton in the summer, hopefully while they are singing, and maybe if your garden has berried shrubs or you feed the birds, you will be seeing them at the time of this Nature Diary.

Amenity Area

Dear Residents of Hankerton,

I am writing to share an exciting project to enhance our village's Amenity Area located next to Old Farm Close. We are planning to plant a selection of new trees to make this space more inviting, and we would love for you to be a part of it.

Our goal is to create a vibrant community orchard and garden that encourages everyone to enjoy the area. We hope these trees will not only beautify our surroundings but also provide fresh fruit for residents to help themselves to in the coming years.

We are looking for donations to help fund the purchase of these trees. If you would like to contribute, you can choose to:

- Make a general donation toward the upkeep and planting of the area.
- Sponsor a specific tree, which can include a name plaque or dedication of your choice.

By supporting this project, you are helping to improve our local environment and creating a lasting legacy for the village. We also welcome any volunteers who might like to help with the initial planting or occasional tidying of the site.

If you are interested in contributing or would like more information, please contact me at katenurden75@gmail.com or drop a note to 1 Hillwell, Hankerton but please respond very soon as the first planting season is on us now, finishing perhaps at the end of March, so we need to get on with it (or else delay the planting until autumn).

Thank you for your time and for helping to make our village an even better place to live.

Best regards,

Hankerton Parish Council.

Charlton and Hankerton Quiz

What is the UK's top food and drink export?

In 1844 USA and Canada played the first international match in which sport?

Gloucester RFC are known as the _____ and Whites

Over 70 people attended the Charlton and Hankerton Quiz last November in Charlton Village Hall. Hankerton residents John Thorne, quiz master, with Peter Wyman, audio and scorer, and Philip Carter, assistant, were joined by village hall committee members in the organisation of the quiz.

Questions covered general knowledge, fruit in popular culture, links, Wales, and music about the weather. Participants were asked to taste and identify 10 different types of herb.

Over £1200 was raised, which has already been spent on improving the play equipment next to the village hall. Hankerton residents are entitled to a discount for hire of the hall: charltonvillagehall.co.uk.

This is the ninth time John, Peter and Philip have run the quiz with Charlton. The next quiz is likely to be in the spring.

A New Year of Connection and Community Care

By Roz Savage MP, South Cotswolds

January often arrives with a mix of feelings. For some it brings that welcome sense of a fresh start - a clean slate, new ambitions, hopeful beginnings. For others it can feel like a much quieter, more solitary month. The festivities have faded, the nights are still long, and the return to routine can leave many of us feeling a little adrift.

This is exactly why the work of our local community organisations matters so much at this time of year. I was genuinely honoured recently to become a Patron of The Churn Project, a charity that has been at the heart of Cirencester for many years. The Churn supports people of all ages who may be facing isolation, financial pressures, or challenges with confidence and wellbeing. Last year alone, 1,762 people found connection, companionship, or practical help through its programmes - an extraordinary testament to what a caring community can achieve.

When you step into their building, you feel it straight away - warmth, dignity, and a deep sense of welcome. As Sarah Bourne, their CEO, put it so beautifully, the Churn is built on compassion, courage, and a belief in what people can achieve when they feel supported. I have seen firsthand the difference this makes, and I am delighted to play a small part in helping the charity continue strengthening community life across the South Cotswolds.

Another wonderful example of local togetherness is The Long Table, now with vibrant hubs in both Stroud and Cirencester. I had lunch there recently with my team, and it reminded me just how powerful a shared meal can be. Every hot dish is offered on a pay-as-you-can basis, making sure that everyone has access not only to good food but to company and conversation too. It is hospitality with purpose - a beautifully simple idea rooted in the belief that everyone deserves a place at the table.

That spirit of connection is sparking new ideas right across our area. The Barn Theatre is currently seeking initial funding for an exciting Barn Bus pilot, which would help isolated older residents travel safely to the theatre, with time to shop and socialise beforehand. By putting to use the transport that otherwise sits idle between school runs, the project could become a lifeline during the times of year when loneliness is felt most keenly. We know that engagement with the arts boosts memory, joy and wellbeing, and this scheme could help open those benefits to many more people across Tetbury, Fairford, Lechlade and our surrounding villages.

All these initiatives remind us of something essential. Wellbeing is about more than treatment or services, it is about belonging, shared experiences, and feeling part of community life. As Parliament moves the Mental Health Bill through its final stages, I welcome the progress - and I will continue pressing the Government to look beyond crisis care and invest in the community-led support that prevents people reaching that point in the first place.

January may be quiet, but it is also full of potential. When we come together - over a meal, through a theatre visit, or simply by checking in on a neighbour - we lay the foundations for a kinder, more connected year ahead.

Warm wishes,

Roz

Salt Bins

New people to the area might not be aware that there are 2 salt bins in the village – one by the corner of the Cloatley Road and the other by the sharp bend by Loose Ends/Lifestyle Health and Beauty Salon. Anyone is allowed to use them if the roads are icy but should probably let people know (via the WhatsApp group?) exactly where they have spread it so that dog walkers can avoid it – salt is not good for doggie paws!

Message from the Ministry

I saw a clip of a conversation with comedian Henning Wehn discussing with Jake Wood how if he was a Christian, he would be really mad about the people who only come to church at Christmas. They joked that it's like football - people should have been to a few games before they are allowed to stay for the big match, and that most of them don't even know the names of the players "who's this Gabriel?", or that churches should just close altogether for these times! "Let them come on wet morning in February! "You can't come and wash all your sins in 10 minutes and boom, you're done for the rest of the year"

It was funny, and it was nice to hear a mainstream comedian talk positively about church, but I felt that they had spectacularly missed the point.

Someone had commented on the video quoting theologian William Temple: 'church is the only organisation that exists primarily for the benefit of its non-members'.

Church is not just here for the people who walk through the door on Sunday mornings.

Church is there for the lonely

Church is there for the joyful

Church is there for the family

Church is there for the bereaved

Church is there for the seeker

Church is there for the community it serves

We are the family of God – his only mouth and hands in this world – and we long to share him with anyone and everyone who walks through that door, whether it's for the 1st time or the 1000th time, whether it's in a beautiful act of worship or a fun community event. It's a complete joy to welcome new people or occasional attendees – you are such an important part of our church family (and having lots of people makes singing hymns so much more fun!)

So no, Henning, thanks for the laughs, but we won't be closing our doors and keeping to ourselves as Easter approaches – well be flinging them wide open, and asking anyone who might be interested to come inside and join us for a wonderful celebration – we are each a beloved child of God, and all are welcome in his house.

Just don't forget, we're here all year round too, so don't be a stranger.

Rev'd Bob

The Hannah Ludlow Charity.

Hopefully, as a result of previous Grapevine articles and word of mouth, most parishioners will be aware of this village charity, but with new arrivals in the village this brief notice aims to maintain that awareness. The simple aim of the charity is to help members of our community who are in a position of need, hardship or distress.

Although trustees of the charity try to be aware of those who may qualify for such support, it could quite easily be the case that some hardship or distress may be unknown to them, and a request for assistance can be made directly by the affected person, or by a friend, neighbour or relative on their behalf. Applications for support can be made to The Chairman, Hannah Ludlow Charity, 1 Cloatley Road, Hankerton, Wiltshire. SN16 9LA, whenever that need arises. All verbal approaches or correspondence are treated in strictest confidence, and only open to the Chairman and trustees of the charity.

As a small charity, the support that can be given is limited, but even a little financial gesture reinforces that fellow villagers do care, and it may help to make a difference in outlook for that person in need.

The charity is also able to support young people in the parish who may be raising funds to enable them to undertake charitable work at home or abroad. So, keep an eye on each other, as people in Hankerton always do, and contact the charity if assistance could be given.

WHEN DARKNESS TAKES FLIGHT

We were hungry and You fed us with good things - You put melody and fervour in Your Word to bring

Truth, as we are learning it, to those who do not know - Bringing Light into their darkness to let Your Spirit flow...

You live in us, bring understanding to our hearts Took us from our wilderness, gave us a brand new start

Since Time began, Your Word did too - All Scripture is God-breathed through You.

We believe in You and You have set us free - To share our knowledge with others such as me

You have changed our lives from water into wine And we thank You deeply as we drink, become refined...

You have filled our new hearts with radiance and light - Your Spirit now lives in us, darkness has taken flight...

Surgery News

Flu & Covid vaccines

Took place in October. Uptake was lower this year, although 4,500 adults and 300 2-3 year olds received their vaccinations. There is some concern that whilst MPCC buys and pays in advance for vaccines at a cost of £17 plus VAT per person, if people book but then do not attend, the cost and waste has to be borne by the practice.

Staffing levels

As of 7/10/25, Dr Jenny Whinney began her role in providing maternity cover. There are now 14 permanent doctors attached to MPCC.

On line access to appointments

From the 1 October 2025 all GP Practices have to provide online access for appointments. At MPCC this is available via PATCHs.

Continuity of care

MPCC is looking into ways in which continuity can be enhanced, so that e.g. blood results requested by one GP are returned to that named GP.

Seeing the same GP helps them know you better, making your care more personal, accurate, and quicker over time. It means fewer repeated tests, better advice, and better health overall for patients.

Patient survey

In the patient survey, some patients told us they didn't know that GP appointments could now be booked in advance, with a GP of their choice, at any time during the day.

Appointments are bookable in advance for patients:

 in person at the front desk

  or over the phone or online, via PATCHs  <https://tinyurl.com/3tzeanjp>
